Can anyone stop Cronin and Galvin on the Circuit?

Keith Cronin / Mikie Galvin

Words: Adam Hall & Pictures: Kevin Kelleher

The Munster pairing of Keith Cronin and Mikie Galvin kicked off their NAPA Auto Parts Irish Tarmac Rally Championship title defence in perfect fashion, winning the West Cork International Rally and pinning their names to the top of the 2025 championship standings.

End of rally engine failure for Jon Armstrong handed 2025 West Cork Rally honours to Cronin after a close battle between the two crews over the event's three days of action.

Armstrong and Shane Byrne looked to have claimed a 34.8-second victory before their Ford Fiesta Rally2 ran into trouble after West Cork's final stage. Stewards judged Armstrong to have received outside assistance to make it back to Parc Ferme and was consequently excluded from the final results.

The rally started with Cronin taking control of the leaderboard on Friday's opening four stages. The Citroen C3 Rally2 pilot built an early nine-second lead over fellow Irish Tarmac protagonists Matt Edwards and David Moynihan, Edwards' stage win on Rossmore keeping Cronin within his headlights.

Edwards and Armstrong edged closer to Cronin on Saturday's iconic Ring opener after Cronin made too safe a tyre choice. In a bid to make further in-roads on the repeat pass of Ring, Edwards slid his Hyundai i20 Rally2 off the road and out of ITRC's opening round.

A hat-trick of stage wins for Armstrong and Byrne on Saturday afternoon brought them within 7.5 seconds of Cronin and Galvin with six stages to go on West Cork's final day of action.

Cronin was under pressure and an understeering off-road moment on Sunday's opening Ardfield test allowed Armstrong to half his advantage. An almighty effort through the next Glandore stage resulted in Armstrong bettering his rivals by 7.5 seconds to move into the lead. With Cronin's understeering issues persisting, the experienced champion admitted he wouldn't be drawn into a battle with Armstrong who wasn't registered for championship points.

As it turned out, Cronin and Galvin's maximum haul of Irish Tarmac points resulted in a second West Cork victory in as many years following Armstrong's engine failure.

Josh Moffett and Andy Hayes are the only leading protagonists set to return to the Circuit this year in the same machinery from 12 months ago. Cronin is still adjusting to his new Citroen C3 Rally2, defending Circuit of Ireland winner Edwards showed promising pace in his Hyundai i20 Rally2 debut in West Cork before sliding off, and Callum Devine has been speedy since his Skoda switch last year.

The Circuit's County Tyrone stages will be an almighty test for those getting accustomed to new in-car surroundings.

Eddie Doherty missed out on Irish Tarmac Championship's top positions last year but his recent Circuit of Kerry victory proved his Skoda's potential of a sustained Irish Tarmac challenge in 2025 after finishing third in West Cork.

Tomas Davies continued his impressive recent Historic ITRC form with another West Cork Historic Rally victory, strengthening his position at the top of the Wales Motorsport Fabrication Historic ITRC standings.

It was Neil Williams and Eamon Hayes who set the early historic pace, though, with the fastest time on Ring's Saturday morning opener. Tomas and Eurig Davies responded on the fast Kilbrittain test to move into a 1.1-second lead, a lead they eked out to 5.3 ...

seconds with three more stage wins on Saturday.

Williams was keeping the pressure on Davies who was still holding out in the battle of the Welshmen.

An alternator issue finally ruined Williams' hopes of catching Davies who did well to control his lead for most of the historic's two days of action. Davies eventually finished 31.2 seconds ahead of Williams who nursed his Escort home in second.

With leading modified and junior crews also set to tackle the Circuit of Ireland's two-day itinerary, there will be plenty of interest to follow throughout the field.

A late misfire cost 2024 McEvoy Motorsport Modified ITRC champions Frank and Lauren Kelly a modified victory on the West Cork Rally. They will continue their ongoing rivalry with Damian Toner on the Circuit of Ireland with David Moffett, Michael Cahill, and Brian Lavelle among the two-wheel-drive contenders.

Local man Barry Morris has shown impressive form in his Darrian T90 so far this year and will be one to watch this weekend.
