THE STAGES OF MECSEK

The special stages of Mecsek Rallye are classic Hungarian asphalt rally roads, where the rhythm changes between technical forest sections and flowing mountain roads create the true character of the rally.

Each stage demands a different rhythm, driving style and level of concentration from the competitors. The real challenge often lies in adapting to the constantly changing asphalt conditions and managing tyre wear properly between the service parks.

In the Mecsek mountains, speed is the foundation — but it is the right strategy that can turn it into victory.

SS 1,2 Pécsvárad – Hosszúhetény 15,98 km 12.40 km narrow forestry road with low average speed and constantly changing grip levels the final 3.60 km consists of wide and flowing public road sections with consistent grip the first half of the stage is locally bumpy, with tricky braking zones and true adrenaline sections performance on the forestry section can be decisive not only for the stage itself, but for the overall rally as well

SS 3,6,9 Szentkút – Orfű 8,40 km the opening section of the stage follows a classic hillclimb-style road, climbing continuously where precise racing lines become decisive the middle part is a true commitment section: downhill, flowing and fast, with consistent and high-grip asphalt the final kilometres before the finish become slower and more technical again, including one of the rally's highlighted spectator areas proper management of tyre and brake temperatures can play a key role throughout the stage

SS 4,7,10 Alsómocsolád – Mecsekpölöske jct. 13,45 km the opening 8 km of the rally's longest stage is a narrow and highly technical forestry road with demanding braking zones moisture and the close forest environment can leave dusty sections on the surface, while constantly changing grip levels create an additional challenge the second half of the stage switches to a wide public road section, becoming very fast and heavily bumpy in the valley areas choosing the right pace through the massive rhythm and character changes is essential for a strong result

SS 5,8,11 Árpádtető – Camping 8,45 km the opening half of the stage is an uphill and flowing two-lane mountain road, locally slightly bumpy and demanding full commitment the second half becomes gently downhill on smooth and consistent asphalt, allowing very high average speeds as one of the iconic stages of Mecsek Rallye, strong spectator presence is expected both near the start area and around the famous Lapis junction the final part of the loop remains fast, making tyre strategy especially important. It may look simple on paper — but it definitely is not. A true classic.
